

Animal Cruelty Task Force

Inaugural Newsletter Vol. 1

January, 2007

“Angel” was part of an animal abuse case, where the suspect allegedly hit the dog in the head with a large stone. “Angel” suffered life threatening injuries but survived

It is our pleasure to introduce you to the new Animal Cruelty Task Force Newsletter. In the coming months we will provide updates and information on the cases we are working. Our goal for this newsletter is to keep all our friends informed on our cases, to disseminate important information to the public, and to seek the public’s help on reporting incidents of dog fighting.

The Animal Cruelty Task Force is a joint effort consisting of the Department of Animal Services, the Los Angeles Police Department, and the City Attorney’s Office. The Task Force was assembled to fight animal neglect and abuse, including beatings, poisoning, cockfighting, dog fighting, and bestiality. The Task Force is made up of five Animal Control Officers and two LAPD Detectives. The City Attorney’s Office has dedicated several attorneys to animal cruelty cases, which has ensured that these cases are seen as the serious crimes they are and are prosecuted accordingly.

Many people have asked, “What has the Task Force done?” In an effort to answer this question we are providing statistics that Department of Animal Services Officer Ramirez and Los Angeles Police Department Detective Brumagin have put together for 2006.
